

USU Ext. and Wave Pub.

Christmas and Energy Fair scheduled

2 Oct 1980

Christmas season is quickly approaching and with it many activities. This year USU Extension and Wave Publishing are sponsoring a Christmas and Energy Fair. It will be held Nov. 15 at the Senior Citizen's Center from 12 noon until 8 p.m.

There will be an assortment of activities to attend — various Christmas food, demonstrations, sewing ideas for Christmas, energy conserving demonstrations and booths, plus decorating ideas galore! Directions and handouts will be available. Mark it on your calendar and join the fun!

If anyone would like to set up a Christmas craft or decoration booth or a booth with energy conserving ideas, please contact the Extension Office at 654-3211.

Turkey Demonstration Slated by Extension

You and your friends are invited to a demonstration by Mrs. Flora Bardwell, Nutrition Specialist, from Utah State University. The demonstration will be Friday, November 18 at 2:00 p. m. in the Memorial Building in Heber.

Mrs. Bardwell will give a demonstration on cooking turkey, and Mrs. Gardner will give help on buying floor coverings and will answer your questions on the selection of other home furnishings.

Mrs. Bacon says it will be good. We can all benefit from this instruction, so come and bring your friends.

Lawn Dandelions Is Subject of Extension Meet

"Homeowners who do not like the yellow flowers in their lawns should spray immediately to control dandelions," according to Joel Barlow, USU Area Horticulturist with Utah State University Extension Services. If sprayed early with 2-4D, they can be killed easily and seed will not be formed for new plans. 2-4D, or commercial brand made products with this material in, used now according to directions on the label, will kill most of the dandelions now. This can be sprayed with a hand nozzle sprayer or a 2 or 3 gallon pump sprayer. Be sure to thoroughly clean sprayer after using 2-4D before spraying fruits and vegetables later in the year. Ammonia, 2 tablespoons in the large sprayer and 1 teaspoon in the hand nozzle sprayer will clean them properly.

If further information is desired, leave your name at the Extension Office (654-0341) and I will contact you personally.

If you would like to learn about pruning and lawn weed control demonstrations, you are invited to attend a demonstration which will be held in the Stake Center, 150 N. 200 W., Heber City at 10:30 a. m., Tuesday, April 18, 1972. We will prune several trees and shrubs and you will have the opportunity of asking questions and learning some of the learning-pruning techniques. We hope you will come and bring a friend or neighbor.

While Mr. Barnard is leaving the employ of the Extension Service, he will not leave the county. He will teach at the Wasatch County High School and operate his farm. Mr. Barnard's seven years here as county agent have been marked with unusual success. Special mention should be made of his projects in livestock improvement, including beef and general livestock; also, club work. Wasatch County has a thriving Dairy Herd Improvement Association which has grown from four herds. When Mr. Barnard arrived in the county March 1, 1937, until now it has 27 herds with 555 cows on test. Mr. Barnard also spent considerable time in assisting dairymen in securing good breeding stock, including both cows and purebred bulls, and during his seven years as agent he has enrolled a large number of boys in 4-H projects which started them in the dairy business.

One other successful project, among many, is that of grading range bulls. The Wallsburg Association has cooperated closely and has developed a fine program which has limited cattle to the Hereford breed and the quality of bulls has been raised to a point which is comparable with the highest quality of bulls used in the state. And, while the livestock projects were given due consideration, others come in for their share of attention; crop improvement, weed control, rodent and pest control, and poultry improvement.

Mr. Barnard is a native of Deweyville and received his schooling there, at the Bear River High School at Tremonton and at the Utah State Agricultural College. He received his bachelor of science degree in 1933 and January 2, 1934, he married Rae Abbott of Tremonton. Mark 7, and Steven 3, already plan to help with the farming enterprise of the Barnards. Sep 1944

Home Business Seminar was held at the Homestead Oct. 12 and 13. Several people from the county attended. The purpose and objective, skyrocketing living costs, shrinking dollars and vanishing job markets, are responsible for more people seeking ways to earn additional income. Home businesses whether full time or part time, offer many opportunities to create extra income and share in the American Dream of being your own boss. Working at home is predicted to be one of the major trends in America's economic outlook.

The purpose of this Home Business Seminar was to offer a educational opportunity for us to learn more skills, networking with others and to improve their overall quality of life.

The Home Business Seminar is the first of its kind and will be used throughout the State through the County Extension Services. It was originated by Becky Pappas, our own Wasatch County Extension Agent.

The following presenters were Gladys Maietti, owner of Precious Keepsakes; Marlene Hudman, owner of "The Office Connection; Jeffery Bradshaw, certified public accountant, owner of accounting business in Heber City; Dennis Johnson from Computerland, Orem; Kaylene Thornock, owner of Kaylene's Restaurant Consulting; Dennis and Nicia Gale, owners and operators of Aspen Janitorial Service.

Governor Asks Spending Hike

By STEVE GREEN
SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Gov. Scott Matheson, in his final budget proposal to the Utah Legislature, asked for an 11.4 percent spending hike today to finance education and prison improvements and a salary hike for state workers.

Republican Gov.-elect Norm Bangerter, who takes office next month, has the option of altering Matheson's $2.7 billion spending proposal for fiscal year 1985-86.

Matheson proposed the increased spending be financed by higher revenues he believes will be generated by economic growth. He sought only one tax increase, an 8 percent boost in the cigarette levy which would offset an identical reduction in the federal tobacco tax.

The Democrat's spending blueprint calls for $120 million in new spending for public and higher education, a $7.4 million or 19 percent increase for the Corrections Division and a 5.3 percent pay hike for state workers.

Additionally, Matheson's 74-page budget outline seeks spending increases for economic development and tourism promotion, dislocated workers' programs and new facilities at the Utah State Hospital.

The outgoing governor also asked for funding to hire additional State Tax Commission staff, more Utah Highway Patrol troopers, and for the state to take over Hogle Zoo in Salt Lake City and to assume the County Medical Indigent Program.

Aides to Matheson said the governor, who did not seek reelection, is required to complete the budget before leaving office.

Bangerter also requested Matheson finish the budget and the former House speaker and his staff have been briefed on the proposal, Matheson's aides said.

The Democratic governor's budget plan includes a $43.2 million supplemental budget to finance flood control and damage repair projects and other programs, and a $467 million capital expenditures budget to finance new construction for schools, prison buildings and other state structures.

Smaller requested expenditures would increase by 50 percent the funding of the Economic and Industrial Development and Travel Development budgets.

Although Matheson's budget request forecasted higher-than-expected state revenue, the document warned against a continuation of "insufficient" funding by the Legislature for various projects.

"Projections for calendar year 1985 indicate a surplus of revenues over earlier estimates," said Matheson's budget document, prepared by Budget Director Michael Zuhl.

"However, above average precipitation has resulted in severe flooding and damage to the state infrastructure which will require immediate attention," the spending message said. "Revenues in recent years have been insufficient to prevent the deterioration of the state's physical capital assets and to provide new investment in capital facilities."

The outgoing governor also sought to boost Utah's education spending.

"Perhaps nowhere is the impact of fiscal commitment more strongly felt than in education," said the budget message. "The growth of Utah's school-age population necessitates immediate attention to the issues of classroom size, competitive salaries for educators and funds for libraries, supplies and equipment."

Matheson's budget sought $2.1 billion in the current-account budget, up 10.9 percent from the current $1.9 billion.
